
Print where you need it, when you need it

A network that works for you

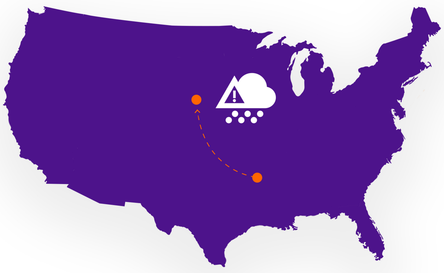
By printing closer to your point of need, you receive your print faster and with reduced transit time, minimizing your shipping costs. In order to serve all your print needs, we've built a network of centralized print production facilities and 13,000 digital connected printers. Here is a look at how you can avoid disruption, get on-time delivery, minimize shipping costs and coordinate multiple locations with the help of this network.

Overcome unexpected disruptions

Unforeseen events should not delay your print. If a region shuts down due to bad weather or a natural disaster, your printer should be able to reroute the project to a nearby location and print and ship seamlessly from there.

19
commercial print production facilities

~2,100
FedEx Office locations nationwide



1M
print jobs a month on average

22-hour
average turnaround time

Receive the print where you need it

Your print should arrive on time and exactly where it's needed. Are you based in San Diego with a conference in New York City? We will print it there and have it ready for you at the event or meeting. Expect high-quality consistency in your print from coast to coast and everywhere in between.

San Diego

New York City

Coordinate several locations with ease

Do you have a grand opening, rebranding or promotion in several different states? We will print at the closest location for each event and ship directly to that site. Sophisticated shipping mode optimization means your shipping costs go down and your speed to market goes up.

You have several print and shipping solutions to choose from. You aren't stuck with one approach. With FedEx Office, your project can be when you need it, where you need it, with the quality you expect.

Learn more: fedex.com/intheknow

FedEx Office