

Shipping to the U.S.
with confidence –

FedEx makes cross-border e-commerce shipping faster and easier

U.S. customs changes for all imports – Effective August 29, 2025

Starting August 29, 2025 at 12:01am (EDT), the de minimis exemption for international shipments into the U.S. is removed. This means that every shipment entering the U.S., regardless of its customs value, will be subject to either informal or formal customs entry, along with all applicable duties and taxes. The previous exemption that allowed shipments valued at USD800 or less to enter duty-free will no longer apply.

Implications for your e-commerce shipments

- 1 Increased compliance and documentation requirements
Shippers must now provide complete and accurate information for each shipment, including the 10-digit Harmonized Tariff Schedule (HTS) code and precise commodity description. Incomplete or missing data may result in customs delays or shipment returns.
- 2 Potential increase in shipping costs
With duties and taxes applied to all shipments, both shippers and recipients may face higher overall transactional costs. This may impact profit margins or require adjustments in final pricing for U.S. customers.
- 3 Potential delays or longer delivery time
More complex customs clearance procedures and stricter documentation checks may lead to a longer processing time and delays at the borders.
- 4 Potential impact on customer experience
Unexpected duty and tax charges, handling fees or delivery delays may frustrate shippers and recipients. Transparent process is key in managing expectations.
- 5 Greater reliance on professional logistics support
Partnering with experienced logistics providers that offer structured, transparent customs support helps simplify compliance and facilitate smoother, more predictable deliveries.
