

Thailand has structured labor laws and a large, skilled workforce. The minimum wage and working hours are regulated nationwide.

Government / Agencies	What You'll Find Here
Labor Law	This site provides legal information on employment standards, workers' rights, and employer obligations. Investors can find essential labor regulations, wage policies, and compliance requirements relevant to operating businesses and managing workforce relations in Thailand.
Law on Occupational Safety and Hygiene	This specific page provides downloadable safety regulations and reports. Investors can find workplace safety standards, compliance guidelines, and risk management practices—important for ensuring safe, lawful, and efficient operations in industrial and business environments.
Law on Personal Income Tax	The site offers tax-related information for foreign investors, including corporate income tax, VAT, and incentives. It helps investors understand Thailand's tax system and compliance requirements.
Law on Trade Union	This document outlines Thailand's Labor Relations Act B.E. 2518 (1975), detailing legal frameworks for employer-employee relations, union rights, dispute resolution, and collective bargaining—essential for investors to understand labor compliance and workforce management in Thailand.
Info on Entry, Exit, Transit, and Residence of Foreigners	The document outlines legal definitions, entry and exit requirements, and responsibilities of foreign nationals and transport operators. Investors can use it to understand immigration rules relevant to business travel or foreign workforce planning.