About my move to FedEx:

1. Why am I asked to transfer my TNT account to FedEx Express?

As FedEx Express and TNT continue to integrate, we will gradually migrate TNT customers to FedEx Express. You have been selected to be part of the first phase of migration as your account meets a set of pre-determined criteria. The migration will happen in phases and all TNT customers will eventually be migrated to FedEx Express.

2. I was not informed or do not see this migration with TNT accounts we are using in other countries. Why are you migrating TNT account to FedEx Express in Korea?

(If you only had a TNT account earlier):

It means when you ship using your new FedEx Express account, the total amount payable to FedEx Express will be similar to the total amount that you would have previously paid to TNT for the same service/route. I have questions on billing:

33. My overseas clients request to use their TNT account and pay for it. Can they still use their TNT account to pay the shipment after migration?

Yes, your offshore payer can still use their TNT accounts to ship and pay.

34. My overseas clients ship with TNT and bill to my TNT account. After migration when my TNT account is deactivated, how can they ship with TNT?

Your client can ship with FedEx Express and choose payment options either 'Recipient' or 'Third Party' billing to your new FedEx Express account number. Another option is for you to arrange a remote pickup of import shipments via FedEx Ship Manager at fedex.com or through FedEx Express Customer Care (080-0238000).

35. I ship with TNT, but bill to the TNT account number of my overseas clients. Will their TNT account be transferred to FedEx Express? If not, can I still bill to their TNT account number and ship with TNT after migration?

Our integration is taking place in phases so the timing for the transition of a TNT account to FedEx Express can vary by country/customer. After migration, you need to ship with FedEx Express and bill to your offshore payer's FedEx Express account if they have one already. If the offshore payer does not have a FedEx Express account, you can ask them to create one by calling their local FedEx Express Customer Care.

If you have an urgent need to export using their TNT account or the offshore payer still wants you to bill to their TNT account, your client can initiate a TNT remote pickup for your export shipments through local TNT Customer Service or via MyTNT or MyTNT2.
