2. How do I request notifications for my package?

- FedEx provides you convenient email notifications that you can notify up to 4 email recipients of the shipment status. You can also add a personal message per your preference (not available for the wireless format or non-English characters). Notification types include:
 - ◆ Tendered Notification: Notify the email recipient when a shipment has been taken into FedEx possession.
 - ◆ Exception Notification: Notify the email recipient when a clearance delay or a delivery exception occurs, which could result in a change to the estimated delivery date. The message includes the tracking number, the reason and needed action associated with the exception, and other relevant information. If a clearance delay occurs and once the international shipment is released from clearance process, another automatic message will be sent to notify the email recipient.
 - ◆ Delivery Notification: Notify the email recipient when a shipment has been delivered. The message includes the tracking number, sender name, delivery date/time, and the name of the person who signed for the shipment, if applicable.
 - ◆ Current Status Notification: Notify the email recipient of the tracking detailed results currently being displayed on the Detailed Results tab.

3. Can I change the delivery address of my package?

- Yes, you can. However, additional restrictions and fees may apply when rerouting packages. Please note that a reroute is not a guaranteed service. Hence the FedEx Money Back Guarantee does not apply to shipments where the delivery address was changed.
